NO SOCIETY LEADER

Capital Social Circle Has No Acknowledged Head.

Situation Entirely Different From That in Other Big Cities—Too Many Sets of Almost Equal Importance —Many Clever Women.

Washington—"Who is the real leader of Washington society?" is a question frequently asked over the tea cups and in the embrasure of club windows when the social season opens. Although never answered, it never fails to arouse a discussion in which no two participants are agreed.

The late Mrs. Astor's acknowledged supremacy in the New York social world served to draw attention to the fact that the social situation in the capital city is far different from that of New York and that the unquestioned sway of the individual is hardly possible here from the very constitution of society itself. It is different here, in that it possesses several distinct sets and there are persons who are prominent, even leaders in one of these sets who have few affiliations with the others.

This winter's social season at Washington starts with the understanding that there is to be in some sort a reorganization of what in the first president's time was awkwardly called "the republican court"—that is to say, the persons on the invitation list of the White House. Mrs. Taft is represented as having come to the conclusion that by the exercise of judgment in the bringing of people together the interest and advantage of social assemblies in Washington can be enhanced. She desires to center the leading social group within a restricted but better defined circle. She realizes, of course, that it is not wholly possible to carry out this arrangement at what are termed state receptions, but she hopes to lessen or do away with that spirit of tension and dissatisfaction which has regularly followed in the wake of past entertainments, because of the unwillingness of representatives of different social sets to meet on common grounds. Nevertheless, Mrs. Taft is diplomatically edging away from the pit of snobbery. In fact, she is amplifying the scope and tendencies of the White House as a social center.

There is "the White House set" and the diplomatic, official and army and navy sets. Each has a distinct character of its own. Many individuals there are who possess entree to all these circles, yet there are also charming women who, having taken their places within one of these cliques, care little for the doings of the others.

The White House Set.

The White House set necessarily changes as the occupants of the White House change. It reflects the personal tastes of the ruler of the nation and of the first lady of the land. Necessarily, also, political expediency can not be wholly left out in arranging many of the White House gatherings, yet the private entertainments more often than not are made up of those who are genuinely congenial to the White House occupants.

Official society takes its cue largely from the White House set, but it also has many activities of its own. Its leaders are drawn from the families of those senators, representatives and other government officials who have social prestige, wealth and the ability to contribute to the gaiety of the social season.

By common consent the set which is largely made up of the diplomats and their wives is the most alluring of all in Washington, especially to the wealthy outsider who comes to make his home in the capital city. The cosmopolitan character of the corps, the easy, good fellowship which prevails among its members and the fact that the duty of a diplomat in Washington consists largely in making himself agreeable to the people of the country to which he is accredited, give to the social doings of the corps a charm which is felt by all who come within the circle. The adherence to precedent in social matters which is of necessity insisted upon by the diplomats has had a considerable influence in establishing for Washington her own official and social precedents.

Within the circle formed by the army and navy men and the feminine members of their households there is an atmosphere of friendliness which comes of the fact that not only the men but the women have many experiences in common, having "roughed it" in western posts or followed the flag in the Philippines. The men and women of "the service" are a law unto themselves, and the social life which they enjoy is as delightful as can be found anywhere.

Each of these sets boasts its own bright particular stars, and from the fact that they are many it seems that from them might arise some leader who would be generally acknowledged as the feminine guide of smart society. Mrs. Meyer, wife of the secretary of the navy, is an official matron often mentioned as a possible leader, whose favorite friends are by choice the members of the diplomatic corps. Mrs. Meyer has done more entertaining for foreign lords than any other matron in Washington. Her dinner companies are made up largely of diplomats and visiting celebrities.

Mrs. Henderson Popular.

Mrs. John B. Henderson is a matron whose name never fails of mention in any discussion of social leaders. She is the enthusiastic, broad-minded, fond of society and has wealth and popularity and a vast acquaintance of Washington in her favor.

Mrs. Herbert Wadsworth long since established herself as one of the leading spirits of the Washington smart set. Her Thursday evening receptions, which begin as musicals and are generally followed by dancing, have attained the importance of state functions.

The smartest of the smart are ribboned sways of the individual, called "the republican court"—that is to say, the persons on the invitation list of the White House. Mrs. Taft is repre-

VERY, VERY IMPUDENT

By CARL JENKINS

(Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.)

Judge Cliff was a widower with one child—a daughter, Viola. Colonel Spencer was a widower with one child—a son, Robin. Judge Cliff had a manor house called The Beeches. Colonel Spencer had a manor house called The Elms. The two properties adjoined.

The Judge and the colonel were old cronies, but they seldom visited each other at their homes. When they met outside it was "Billy" and "Tom," and the greatest good fellowship. There was no line fence between their properties. At the rear of his grounds the Judge had a big chestnut tree. At the rear of his the colonel had the same.

It should have been that the son and daughter of these old cronies were at least friends, but as a matter of fact up to the time that Viola Cliff was nineteen years old, and Robin two years her senior, they had never met. The two families had not been neighbors over a year, and the young folks were away at college and boarding school. Sometimes the Judge had said to the colonel:

"Colonel, you have a son, I believe?"

"Yes, fine boy. Judge, you have a daughter, I believe?"

"Yes, fine girl."

And that was all the two old cronies knew of each other's offspring. The Judge would have moved into the city for the winter in September, but for a whim of the daughter's. She wanted to wait for the chestnuts to ripen. The trees were loaded, but she must wait for the frosts to ripen the nuts and bring them patterning down. She had never gathered chestnuts.

"Well?" Queried the Young Man.

EDITORS EXCHANGE

Mrs. Warren B. Brown, Editor.

Contrary to reports we are glad to note that the Booster Editor of the West Coast Magazine are both alive and flourishing. A message comes from Los Angeles saying he was neither dead nor dying, and furthermore he would be a bigger booster than ever in 1911, and he has decided to eat ginger cake daily and wash it down with a glass of ammonia. That ought to make him "go some". We are happy to note that the report is not true, for boosters are scarce.

We wish the Editor of the flourishing West Coast Magazine a very prosperous New Year.

THE PLAYGROUND.

Tourists visit the children's playgrounds in San Francisco in automobiles and watch the children's games for hours.

Do you remember when you were a boy or girl and dug in the sand, or baked mud pies in the open air and return home with rosy cheeks?

Richmond women's clubs and every lodge organization speak in great favor of Richmond's children's playground. Let the people change the immaterial to the material.

The child's motor activity calls into full play the larger use of all muscles of his body, and it can only get this on the playground in all around games during the child's growth. This exercise is needed.

The public playground would justify itself alone upon the fact that it cuts out evil associations. But it does more than that. It changes harmful thoughts and habits into normal healthful ones. Philanthropists could do no better thing than to buy and endow in the congested districts of the cities, playgrounds for the children. They are needed more than libraries. — S. F. Daily News.

All the Richmond banks are in a prosperous condition.

Roraback & Chandler, popular grocers, it is reported, have sold to an eastern merchant.

Frank Thole, the real estate broker may soon secure another factory.

Superintendent S. Berndt of the California Wine Association has a good treatment for la grippe.

Philpott Dry Goods Co. have a large trade from all parts of Richmond, San Pablo and Stege.

Paul Glaser has completed the store near the Florin block, and is now engaged on the new theatre at Eleventh st. for Mrs. Helms and is about to erect another on the Conley property. Next!

J. O. Barker has finished a residence for C. F. Parker on Fourth street and another for Ben Spagnoli near East Macdonald ave. Barker always has work because he works more and talks less.

H. L. Penry has, among others, completed the brick and cement contract on the Neill building and his work is A. 1. Like other contractors Penry never goes to sleep on the job. He rushes his work and that is why he is always employed.

We wish the Editor of the flourishing West Coast Magazine a very prosperous New Year.

THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF RICHMOND
AT HOME PERMANENTLY.

In sunny California, in the heart of the great San Pablo Valley, in the center of the growing, busy city, the center of distribution for all city points by nature and by the choice of the major population; the center for all railway and mail and express traffic; at the center of the multiplicity of factories; the center for the corporation interests and their main offices; at the school center, the church center, the lodge center, the business center; at the center of transient travel; the center of all the water fronts and the center of the north, south and west ferry systems, near the proposed location of the U. S. dry dock and ship-building plant, near the terminal stations; on the best street in California, at the junction of Macdonald-ave. and Sixth st., where the big central Richmond post-office is, where electric cars frequently come and go to and from all parts of Richmond; on the main Oakland car line, near the proposed terminus of the Key Route, on the main car line toward the ferry to the County of Marin; in the population center—was the corner selected by large and able financiers for the home of "The First National Bank of Richmond." The center of the busy commercial metropolis, in the heart of hearts and the center of centers, was "feathered the nest" of the "Baby Bank of Baby Richmond," which, with an authorized capital of $100,000, shows, in a brief summer's growth, a roll of assets aggregating more than $340,000, a remarkable record to the credit of the business sagacity of financiers at the head of the new bank, including the stockholders, directors and bank officers.

This bank was organized chiefly by Clinton E. Worden, Esq., and Charles J. Crary, of this city, both experienced in banking from the ground floor. This bank represents the combination of financial interests of a group of men representing large wealth, and a diversity of great corporate interests who are investing their money in this city; who can do things; who will develop a city in every artery of commercial resource.

This bank, starting business in a temporary location on Macdonald avenue, moved to its permanent home, announcing its "at home" in the local press, for "Wednesday, December 21, 1910." The removal was made in record time. At 1 p. m., temporary bank closed and removal began; 2 p. m., removal ended and adjustment in the bank started; 4 p. m., adjustment ended and bank ready for business, in the general building of The First National Bank, with the front elevation on Macdonald-ave. and side elevation on Sixth-st, Class A, two-story, cost, including the interior and exterior appointments, $50,000.

The building is constructed of Roman brick of reddish brown tinge, with mortar to match and raked out joints; base of sandstone, vertical grooves, and cornice and doors of copper.

Second story finished in dark cement floors, each room with wardrobe and wash basins, glass plate.

The interior of bank is in dull finish mahogany wood work; beam ceiling, Vermont marble wainscoting with verdantique marble base; black marble deal plates; spun brass finish hardware, locks, girdles and chandeliers; all plate glass windows and inside beveled, leaded French plate glass in partitions; vault front all marble.

A room especially for use of depositors with tables; banking room with steel cages for accountants; president's office, office of cashier, and the directors' room; the vault of heavy concrete with twisted corrugated steel bars running both ways about one foot apart each way; Mosler double door and structure of chrome steel, two time locks and vault lined with steel; inside a Mosler manganese round safe; also safe deposit boxes.

The furniture is of mahogany, the floors of the lobby are of tile laid in unique design; the workroom is covered with battleship linoleum and the office floors are covered with most expensive carpet.

Perfect ventilation, light and heat are maintained and the building is sanitary throughout. The chandeliers are large globes, dull translucent. The safe deposit vault is surrounded by an alley way that is lighted all night. Over the ves-

This is the big New Year's event eagerly awaited by the women of Alameda county because it has been so often proved that at special sales as well as in regular trading, shoppers can, in their all-the-year round purchasing do better in Oakland than in any other city around the bay.

A most satisfactory year's business, closing with an immense Holiday trade, has resulted in more broken lines, surplus stocks and good goods slightly soiled than ever before.

During January, all these "regular" goods will be offered at "special" prices that will furnish numerous daily surprises. See daily papers for details.

Five Years of Severe Rheumatism
The cure of Henry J. Goldstein, 14 Barton Street, Boston, Mass., is another victory for Hood's Sarsaparilla. This time the medicine was needed in many cases where others have utterly failed. Mr. Goldstein says: "I suffered from rheumatism five years; it kept me from business and caused me excruciating pain. My knees would become as stiff as steel. I tried many medicines without relief, then took Hood's Sarsaparilla, soon felt much better and in a few months was entirely cured. I recommend Hood's."

Doubtful Compliment.
Tall Clerk—I don't think the boss trusts me much.

The True Bohemian.
"A true bohemian is a man, who borrows a dollar and then invites you to lunch with it."

"Wrong again. A true bohemian is a man who invites himself to lunch with you, and then borrows a dollar."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Up to Him.
"Do you think you can manage with my salary of $12 a week, darling?" he asked, after she had said yes.

"I'll try, Jack," replied she. "But what will you do?"

The True Bohemian.
"A true bohemian is a man, who borrows a dollar and then invites you to lunch with it."

Short Clerk.—Why, he said you were as honest as the days were long.

Tall Clerk.—Yes, but he always says that when the days are short.

Two Chemistry Triumphs.

Two remarkable instances in which the chemist's laboratory has supplanted the farmer and the field are cited in a recent publication. There was a time when India produced large quantities of indigo every year on plantations. The planters were warned that over in Germany chemists were at work making indigo, but they only laughed. Then the announcement came that synthetic indigo, made in the laboratory, was a commercial success. It was absolutely the same as the natural indigo, only, if anything, a little purer. Now India no longer supplies the world with indigo. A German laboratory makes the whole supply and even India buys in Germany.

There was a time when large areas in France were devoted to the cultivation of madder root, from which the red dye alizarin was made. Again a German chemist improved upon nature and made artificial alizarin at a cost of less than one-third that of the natural product. It was an inferior imitation; it was the real thing. Now Germany supplies the world with alizarin. The only red cloth you will ever see to day is that dyed with the natural dye in the trousers of the French gendarmerie. And this is purely for sentimental reasons. The French government maintains a farm and grows a few acres of madder, that the French army need not be dependent upon its natural enemy, Germany, for anything it uses. It would seem wise to change the color scheme of the trousers.

Lincoln's Religion.

Father St. Cyr, a Catholic priest from St. Louis, who attended Catholic missions in Southern Illinois sometime 15 years ago, wrote of the Lincoln family. Once there was an Indian named Big Smoke, employed as a missionary to his fellow Smokes. A white man, encountering Big Smoke, asked him what he did for a living. "Umph!" said Big Smoke, "me preach." "What so? What do you get for preaching?" "Me get ten dollars a year." "Well," said the white man, "that's damn poor pay." "Umph!" said Big Smoke, "me damn poor preacher."

The Toothbrush Plant.

Father St. Cyr, a Catholic priest from St. Louis, who attended Catholic missions in Southern Illinois sometime 15 years ago, wrote of the Lincoln family. In his account of missionary work, "I visited several times the Lincoln home in Southern Illinois. The father and stepmother of Abraham Lincoln both were Catholics. How they became so I do not know. They were not well instructed in their religion; but they were strong and sincere in their profession of it. I said mass regularly in their house. Abraham was not a Catholic; he never had been one and he never led me to believe that he would become one. At the time he was 20 years old, a thin, tall young fellow, kind and good-humored; he used to assist me in preparing the altar for mass. Once he made me a present of a half dozen of chairs. He had made those chairs with his own hands, expressly for me; they were simple in form and fashion as chairs used to country places then would be."

Now for the other side. Mrs. Ida Tarbell writes: "Abraham Lincoln was never a Catholic in early life as some have supposed. His father, Thomas Lincoln, was a Baptist, and Lincoln attended the church of that denomination in his early days in Indiana. In Springfield he attended the Presbyterian Church, although he was never a member of any denomination."

Pernasal.

Dr. A. is a specialist in nervous ailments. In his most successful cases "persuasion" has played an important role. Sixty-year-old Frank has evidently had opportunity to imbibe his father's clews on the efficacy of persuasion, while Dr. A. contends, appeals to the highest psychic functions.

It was only a few mornings ago that Mrs. A. overheard an altercation in the kitchen between Master Frank and the cook. Mary's voice rose in louder protestations. Mrs. A. hastened to the scene, and arrived just in time to see her son seize a convenient broom and threaten Mary.

"Why, Frank," she exclaimed in horrified amazement, "what are you doing?"

But Frank was equal to the occasion. "I'm just trying to persuade Mary to some angel cake," he explained in a matter of fact way.

If this treatment may not have appealed to Mary's highest psychic functions, it at any rate tickled her sense of humor. Frank gained his point.
